WEATHER KEY POINTS
11/12/21 - 11/18/21

Friday- Thursday
- Areas of dense fog will continue each night and through the late morning hours across portions of the Central Valley and far northern California deeper mountain valleys, with greatly reduced visibility at times
- Fire weather conditions will remain elevated to briefly critical across coastal southern California Friday due to breezy conditions of 20 to 35 mph, warm temperatures, and low humidity levels
  - Some breezy conditions will also continue across the southern California mountains Saturday, though wind speeds will be lighter for most areas
- Otherwise, no significant or impactful weather is expected through early next week, with some showers potentially making a return to far northern California through the first half of next week
